Save the Children Canada would like to acknowledge those who have contributed so generously to the development of this paper, Exit Routes.

Fadi Barakat Fadel, Program Manager, Sexual Exploitation for Save the Children Canada, offered his insight and expertise as both a former experiential youth and as a Manager with the Exit Routes project. His commitment to the methodology of youth participation has driven the Exit Routes framework.

Anita Sheth is the Advocacy Coordinator for Save the Children Canada. Her brilliant research and editorial skills have contributed significantly to the development of this paper and the analysis of the project experience.

Jen Harrison, Coordinator for the Exit Routes Project, has been key in sharing her insight and experience from the day to day reality of what it means to engage youth in the exiting process.

Lisa Beckett has provided invaluable research assistance and great sensitivity in carrying out interviews with experiential youth.

Special thanks to the Government of Canada, Justice Canada, for making funding available for this project and believing in the methodology of youth participation and youth voice.

To the Honourable Senator Landon Pearson for her unconditional support and guidance, and her passion for bringing forth the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of youth.

And most importantly, we thank the youth participants from the Sexually Exploited Youth Speak Out Network and the Exit Routes participants for their strength, courage, resiliency, and shared journey, and for allowing Save the Children Canada to have the privilege of being a part of their lives and their truth.

...it is estimated that one million new children enter the global child sex industry annually.
